THE NOVEMBER ELECTIONS. THE NORTH, A UNIT.
The "Old Brown" Game a Failure!
The Democracy did not manage the Harper's Ferry folly from first to last, it is certain they seized it with the utmost avidity as a means of operating against the Republican party in the then pending elections.

IN THE INSANE ASYLUM.

THE KANSAS HERALD OF FREEDOM.
The Kansas Herald of Freedom is quoted by the Buchanan press as proof of the story recently trumped up, that Old Brown ruthlessly murdered five men in Kansas before his sons were killed.

MR. BATES AND THE PRESIDENCY.
Hon. Edward Bates, of Missouri, has come out emphatically on the Republican side, having published a document clearly defining his position. This brings Mr. Bates within the ring of Presidential candidates on the part of the Republicans.

ILL.—Senator Douglas has been seriously ill, at Washington city, for a week past, with bilious fever or gout in the stomach. On Friday evening great fear was entertained that his disease would prove fatal; but he is since reported convalescent.

St. Louis.

St. Louis, Mo., Nov. 7, 1859.
Having been requested by many friends to write them all about this great City of the West, I have concluded to put down a few items and send you for all.

There are several routes by Railroad from Lewisburg to this city, and so far as I can learn they do not differ very materially as to distance, time nor expense. Perhaps the most central is via Harrisburg, Pittsburg and Indianapolis. Other routes are on the North, via Elmira, Dunkirk or Buffalo, Cleveland and Chicago; on the South, via the Baltimore and Ohio Road. These connect at different points in their course, by means of intermediate roads, and also with other routes, thus giving the traveler a choice of several.

St. Louis is situated on the right bank of the Mississippi, 18 miles below the entrance of the Missouri river, 182 miles above the mouth of the Ohio, 818 miles from the falls of St. Anthony, 1182 miles above New Orleans, and 150 miles below Jefferson City, the Capital of the State of Missouri. The site rises from the river by two plateaus of limestone formation, the first twenty and the second sixty feet above the floods of the Mississippi river. The ascent to the first plateau is somewhat abrupt, the second rises more gradually and spreads out an extensive plain or prairie. This plain, west of the city, is not perfectly flat like some of the prairies of the west, but rolling, interspersed with little hills covered with a native growth of maple and other forest trees. The limestone is generally found so far as I have examined—in regular stratified layers, generally from twenty to fifty feet below the surface. It is much lighter and more easily broken than our Pennsylvania limestone. It is a rich clay loam, similar in appearance to the soil of the northern part of Lewisburg. The present site of the City of St. Louis was selected by LaSalle, in 1764, as one possessing peculiar advantages for the trade, and for defense against the savage Indians who then held almost undisputed sway over this western country. Probably in selecting this site, the trader considered principally the benefits which would arise in his business from the confluence of the different rivers. This has confirmed his forecast in this respect, but this is not all situated, as St. Louis is midway in the Valley of the Mississippi, and midway between the Alleghenies and the Rocky Mountains, nearly in the geographical center of our great country, there is no inland city which can look forward with so much confidence to the future as this.

The population of St. Louis, in 1857, was about 15000, more than one-half of whom were absent, a great part of the year, engaged in trapping. In 1859, the census shows the population to have been only 9,415—while it is now estimated at nearly 200,000. More anon.

One of the numerous soft spots with which Virginia abounds, has offered a reward of $5,000 for the head of Hon. J. R. Goldings. We hope the "patriotic" individual will go to Ashabula, and endeavor to take it himself; there would be one fool the less in Virginia.

CARPETS—a fine assortment by Harsh & Goodman.

To the Tax Collectors of Union Co.
As my time will soon expire, I wish Collectors to bear in mind that my account with the State and County must be settled by the 1st of Jan. 1860, and I hope all Collectors will have their accounts settled by Dec. Court. By reference to my books, I have not yet received quite $2000 of the County Tax, although some of my good friends instruct me that I have been shaving County Orders. On the contrary, I have advanced $1000 out of my own pocket to oblige friends that held Orders against the County. I hope every Collector will pay attention to this request, so that the County may be paid in full at Dec. Court. A word to the wise is sufficient.
